HOW MUCH MAKES A MAN RICH.

"To be rich," said William L. Marcy, at one time Secretary of State, "requires only a satisfactory condition of mind. One man may be rich with a hundred dollars, while another in the possession of millions, may think himself poor, and if necessities of life are enjoyed by each it is evident that the man who is best satisfied with his possession is the richest." To illustrate this idea Mr. Marcy related the following anecdote: "While I was Governor of the State of New York I was called upon one morning at my office by a rough specimen of a backwoodsman, who stalked in and commenced conversation by inquiring 'if this was Mr. Marcy?' I replied that was my name. 'Bill Marcy?' said he. I nodded assent. 'Used to live in Southport, didn't ye?' I answered in the affirmative, and began to feel a little curious to know who my visitor was, and what he was driving at. 'That's what I told 'em,' cried the backwoodsman, bringing his hand down on his thigh with tremendous force. 'I told 'em you was the same Bill Marcy who used to live in Southport; but they would not believe it, and I promised the next time I came to Albany to come and see you, and find out for sartain. Why, you know me, don't you, Bill?' I didn't exactly like to ignore his acquaintance altogether, but for the life of me I could not recollect having seen him before, and so I replied that he had a familiar countenance, but that I was not able to call him by name. 'My name is Jack Smith,' answered the backwoodsman, 'and we used to go to school together thirty years ago, in the little red school house in old Southport. Well, times have changed since then, and you have become a great man and got rich, I suppose.' I shook my head and was going to contradict the impression, when he broke in: 'Oh, yes you are, I know you are rich; no use denying it. You was comptroller for—for a long time; and the next time we heard of you you was governor. You must have had a heap of money, and I am glad it—glad to see you getting along so smart. You was always a smart lad at school, and I knew you would come to something.' I thanked him for his good wishes and opinion, but told him that political life did not pay so well as he imagined. 'I suppose, said I, fortune has smiled on you since you left Southport?' 'Oh, yes,' said he, 'I ain't got nothing to complain of, I must say I have got along right smart. You see shortly after you left Southport our whole family moved up into Vermont, put right into the woods, and I reckon our family cut down more trees and cleared more land than any other in the state.' 'And so you made a good thing of it. How much do you consider yourself worth?' I asked, feeling a little curious to know what he considered a fortune, as he seemed to be so well satisfied with. 'Well,' he replied, 'I don't know exactly how much I am worth; but (straightening himself up) if all my debts were paid I think I should be worth three hundred dollars clear cash!' He was rich for he was satisfied."

Never Tell a Lie.

Somehow theory and practice don't seem to hitch up together much better than an irascible cat and a bull dog in the hey-day of his youth and cussedness. Last Sunday Parson Bangle became disgusted with the untruthfulness of mankind and preached a vigorous sermon in denunciation of society falsehood. He declared that lies told out of politeness were just as wicked as those told with the deliberate intention of deceiving to the value of a horse. In fact, these society lies get folks into the habit of lying, and they readily pick up the other kind. The sermon made a great impression. Many of the congregation resolved to reform. Coming out of church, Deacon Jones said to Judge Badger, who sits in front of him: "Judge, I hope you didn't mind my putting my feet under your pew?" The Judge was about to reply; "Oh, certainly not," but he thought of the sermon and answered: "I did, though; your old hoofs took up all the room, and were a fearful nuisance." "Well," said the deacon, "the hair oil you use smells so it nearly forced us to leave the pew." They glared at each other, and just then Mrs. Badger and Miss Jinks came along. Miss Jinks had asked: "How do you like my new bonnet?" "Oh, I thought it just love—" replied Mrs. Badger, and then she thought of the sermon and continued: "No, I didn't either. It is a horrid thing. I wouldn't be seen with it." And Miss Jinks got mad and replied: "Well, if I were you I'd not wear dirty stockings to church; and if I did I'd keep 'em out of sight." While these honest conversations were going on Mrs. Ragbag had had said to her next door neighbor, Mr. Gallagher: "I hope the crying of our baby last night didn't disturb you?" And Gallagher had replied: "No—that is—yes. I wanted to brain the brat." And then Mrs. Ragbag called him a wretch and wept. And then the clergyman came out and asked young Symonds how he liked the sermon. Symonds said: "It was a grand el—er—no, Parson it was blamed nonsense." "Sir," said the parson, and he drew himself up indignantly. Just then Ragbag and Gallagher, after telling each other some truth, clinched. Deacon Jones was trying to hold Miss Jinks from scratching Mrs. Badger, and every body was mad. It took tremendous efforts to stop the rows and prevent a scandal, and, as it was, every body went away mad with every body else. And the parson went home and meditated in a gloomy frame of mind for three hours, and finally concluded that society lying was wicked; but he wouldn't preach against it again. It's altogether too happy a sin to be given up.

The Columbia Entrance.

Any damage to the commerce of the Columbia falls upon the producer, who is also a consumer, more than upon any one else. So we view with alarm the late disaster at the Columbia bar, which already has had the effect to turn away vessels that were bound for the Columbia to other ports. When a vessel drawing six feet less than the water that should be on the bar founders upon it, we are in serious danger of losing the confidence of business men, and may expect to see our commerce diverted to Puget Sound, unless immediate steps are taken to improve the bar, so that vessels deep loaded can cross it.

So far as direction of commerce to Puget Sound is concerned, the only objection we see is the increased cost of 150 miles additional railroad transportation from Portland to Tacoma. Whenever the Sound can do our shipping as cheaply as it ought to be done by the Columbia river, it is welcome to compete, but if the shoaling of the river and the bar is to tax production, then it is time the producer made himself heard, and the ears of Congress were besieged with the clamors of a people who demand a fair appropriation suited to their needs and their importance.

In looking over exchanges, we read of demands made on Congress for tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars to improve rivers and harbors that have but slight claims to the public notice compared with the importance of the Columbia river. This stream is the water way of a vast and valuable region of country that will rapidly be settled and developed, and already requires much shipping to carry away its surplus products. The day is close at hand when our products will astonish the world. We have equal area of wheat lands with California, and can produce much more reliably than that state can. Last year (1880) California's wheat crop amounted in quantity to more than fifty million bushels, and before the year 1890 the valley of the Columbia will produce as much. Within two years the completion of the trans-continental line of railroad will give us opportunity to open up a vast commerce with Asia. All things promise greatly for the future of our commercial relations if the entrance of the Columbia can be improved and made safe for large vessels to cross.

The present view is discouraging, and all the people of the wide region interested will watch to see what action Congress will take for their relief.—Willamette Farmer.

The Messiah of Israel.

Apocops of the Jews, I heard a story the other day that admirably illustrates their intense belief in their future. It was told me by a poet. He said: "A few years ago I was visiting at the house of—(mentioning one of the best known names in New York), and there was a brilliant company assembled there. One evening there was a reception, and among the people who came was a gentleman of such noble mien, such lofty features, such a superb and dignified presence, such a placid serenity, such a manly beauty in every line of his face and person, that as he moved in the crowd I couldn't turn my eyes away from him. He seemed to hold me with a spell. I think he was the handsomest man I ever saw; it wasn't merely physical beauty, it was spiritual beauty as well. His whole face was radiant with the 'solar light.' He had very dark eyes—large, Oriental eyes—a leonine mass of dark hair, and was full-bearded. I was so fascinated by him that I hardly felt like talking, but after a while found myself seated beside a charming Jewess, Miss X—a young woman full of enthusiasm for her race, and proud to talk of it. 'Oh,' said she, 'the day is not far distant when we shall go back to Jerusalem. We are accumulating wealth and power that we may bring them together there and make it like the city of a dream. The great bankers, the Rothschilds, and the rest, will bring their wealth there, and we shall rebuild the temple with their treasure. We have the capacity to do great things. Our blood makes good leaders, Beaconsfield is a Jew, Jules Simon is a Jew, and there is Hebrew blood in Gambetta's veins. Then in the arts we have shown our capacity for success—bark, they're playing one of the 'Songs Without Words'—Mendelssohn was a Jew, Rachel was a Jewess; there is no knowing to what heights we might rise if the foot of the world was taken off our necks, as it will be, as it surely will be for God has promised—your God and mine."

"Then" said the poet, "you'll choose you a king—one of the Rothschilds, I suppose?" "No—no—we have our king. Our king must be of the lineage of David."

"And can you find a son of David after all these centuries?" "Oh, yes; it is a part of our religion to keep the family records. There must be a setting straight of genealogies at every week of week-years (forty-nine years.) We know where to find our king—he is already chosen, waiting to be crowned."

"And where is he now?" asked the poet.

"There," said the Jewess, and she pointed to the man who had fascinated me. "It is the Baron—of London; he is recognized by all who keep the faith, as the one upon whose head the crown would be placed if the day of restoration should come to-morrow."

Peruvian Bitters.

The Count Clinch was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1880. This illustrious man was afflicted with an intermittent fever, from which he was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1882, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectively cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroy. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order of Loebe & Co., agents for Astoria.

The Westport Shingle Manufacturing Company are now prepared to furnish all orders to Westport, Oregon.

A cough, cold or sore throat should be stopped. Neglect frequently results in an incurable lung disease or consumption. Brown's Bronchial Troches do not disorder the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but act directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, give relief in asthma, bronchitis, croup, catarrh, and the throat troubles which singers and public speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's bronchial troches have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the few staple remedies of the age. Sold at 25 cents a box everywhere.
